

CAPT. HARRY A. ORT NAMED STATE EN- FORCEMENT OFFICER

Moonshiners and Bootleggers Had Better Beware—Appointment of Local Man Will Prove Popular.

Captain Harry A. Ort, former local chief of police, has been named prohibition enforcement officer and given the whole state of Kentucky as his "beat." The announcement that this fearless officer of unusual ability as a detective has been named to search out the infractions of the Federal prohibition laws in the state of Kentucky, will bring a shudder to the moonshiners and bootleggers who have had occasion to know of his ability and who have heard of his activities as a sleuth.

During his administration as chief of police of Maysville, Mr. Ort was very active in the enforcement of the dry laws and met with considerable success, unearthing many infractions of the laws and taking several stills, capturing the moonshiners. Many of these cases were taken by Chief Ort direct to the Federal Court and this no doubt, attracted the attention of the Federal authorities to his ability.

The announcement of Chief Ort's appointment to the Federal staff of detectives is from Washington, D. C., through the office of Chief Prohibition Agent Sam Collins at Lexington.

Chief Ort will assume his duties immediately and those who know him know that something will come to pass.

I want the public to know I have opened a shoe repair shop on East Second street, next to Sunlight cream station. 9-12t LAWRENCE CLARK.

BOOTLEGGER'S CONVENTION AT VANCEBURG

The Vanceburg Sun says: From appearances Saturday the moonshiners and bootleggers must have held a convention here. Every one of the guild known and suspected hereabouts were in attendance. No doubt matters concerning their craft were discussed, such as over-production, limiting production, a cut out for so many days, cutting prices, stabilizing prices, boosting prices, the permissible use of potash, buckeyes and other poisonous substances; whether the producer be permitted to peddle his own product or sell only to registered bootleggers. Also whether cracked corn will make a better article than meal and whether yellow corn product will turn out more lightening than white corn and many other related subjects all relating to the good of the order and the prosperity of so many of our citizens.

LIFE-LONG ROMANCE IS ENDED IN MARRIAGE HERE

Manchester Couple Married in Maysville This Week Had Been Sweethearts From Childhood Days.

The Manchester Signal says: There is a touch of romance in the marriage of Mott Scott, 61, and Elnora Markland-Cooper, 60, at Maysville Wednesday by Rev. Peters. Mott Scott and Elnora Markland were born in Monroe township and in youth made mud pies together on the banks of the Ohio. At the same crude school house they studied McGuffey text until the books were dog-eared. At a voters age their paths divided. They settled at Manchester and passed a long married life as neighbors.

When Mr. Scott became a widower Mrs. Scott was not in sight and it seemed to be a case of out of sight out of mind. Mr. Scott married another but Mrs. Scott remained single for fifteen years.

Their marriage Wednesday seemed to be the culmination of a lifetime longing.

National Officials to Attend Celebration for General Grant to Be Held in Clermont and Brown Counties in April.

Preparations for the celebration of the Grant centenary, the last of April, received impetus Wednesday, when it was announced that President Harding, General Pershing and cabinet would come to Cincinnati and be in the party making up the boat trip to Point Pleasant, which will be the opening feature of the celebration.

H. A. Brand, who is assisting Judge Hugh Nichols of Batavia the originator of the plans for the celebration, said that April 27, was the tentative date of the celebration.

Medals now being struck for the 100th anniversary of the birth of Grant will have a portrait of the general on one side and a facsimile of the cabin in which he was born on the other. Proceeds from the sale of the medals are expected to be diverted to the building of community houses at Bethel and Georgetown, and to the construction of a road from New Richmond to Point Pleasant.

DON'T LOOK LIKE STEEL PLANTS ARE TO LEAVE NEWPORT

Letter Received Friday From One of the Mr. Andrews Indicates That Plants Will Remain in Newport Under Protection.

A letter received Friday by Mr. A. D. Cole from Mr. J. G. Andrews, head of the Newport Rolling Mills, indicates that the Andrews Steel plant and rolling mills will not be moved from Newport. It is thought that Judge Cochran's recent injunction and the splendid protection given by the state troops has caused the concerns to change their minds about any change of location.

The letter received Friday by Mr. Cole is from Mr. J. G. Andrews who is at the head of the Newport Rolling Mills, a subsidiary to the Andrews Steel Mills, which is headed by a brother. Both plants however are owned by the same company and the same action would probably be taken by both plants.

Mr. Andrews' letter follows:

My Dear Mr. Cole: Replying to your letter of the 17th relative to sending a committee of business men to endeavor to induce us to move our plant to Maysville, we do not know how the rumor was started relative to our moving our plant, but will say one thing that we have been here for thirty years, and with protection such as we have been given by the state authorities, primarily the Governor, we are going to see the thing through and stay in Newport if it is at all possible.

Thanking you for your interest in the matter and with kindest regards, I am, Yours very truly,
JOSEPH GOFF ANDREWS.

FIRM SUES TO RECOVER LOSS IN CHLO WRECK

Negligence and Poor Seamananship Is Charged by Cincinnati Firm in Attempt to Recover.

The Harmeyer & Brand Co., Cincinnati dental dealers, will contest the claim that the owners of the steamer Chilo are entitled to limited liability in connection with the sinking of that boat when it hit part of the stone work of Ohio River Dam 35 on November 17 last.

The company filed suit Thursday in the United States Court for the full amount of the freight it had aboard the steamer and which was lost by the sinking.

It denies the statement of the owners, the Cincinnati, Pomeroy & Charleston Packet Co., that the sinking was an "unavoidable accident" and asserts on the contrary that it happened through the fault and negligence of the steamer's officers and crew.

The latter are accused of bad seamanship in trying to make a landing while exposing the boat broadside to an unusually strong current and a high wind which carried it against the dam's guide wall and caused the wreck.

The boat's owners have claimed limited liability by which their loss would be limited to $300, the value of what was saved from the sunken boat.

Recent development of the tank is said to render cavalry units obsolete.

OUR POLICY:

And likewise to earnestly and consistently oppose all things that are not for the good of the county as a whole.

REAPPEARANCE OF AN OLD FRIEND.

It is apparent that the tariff will be one of the main issues of the Congressional campaign of 1922. The New York Times, one of the leaders of the Democratic press, says editorially in a recent issue: "The Democrats ought to resist the making of a new tariff by all means in their power. There is no real general demand for a tariff. It is no time for tariff making. The Republicans really pledged themselves in 1920 not to make one."

From the standpoint of partisan interest the Republicans could wish nothing more to their advantage than for the Democrats to resist the making of a new tariff "by all the means in their power." It is our guess, however, that many Democrats will be found favoring protective duties on various commodities although when a final vote is taken on a bill framed in accordance with the Republican principles the greater part of the Democratic vote will be against it. Individual Democratic Congressmen will go on record as favoring protection on the industries in which their constituents are interested, but when it comes to voting for protection on the industries of the United States as a whole a large majority of the Democrats will vote in the negative.

Since the New York Times says the Republicans pledged themselves in 1920 not to make a tariff law, it is worth while to examine the platform on which exactly what the Republicans pledged themselves to do. The tariff plank says:

"The uncertain and unsettled condition of international balances, the abnormal economic and trade situation of the world and the impossibility of forecasting accurately even the near future, preclude the formulation of a definite program to meet conditions a year hence. But the Republican party reaffirms its belief in the protective principle and pledges itself to a revision of the tariff as soon as conditions shall make it necessary for the preservation of the home market for American labor, agriculture and industry."

The Times says the Republicans pledged themselves not to make a tariff. The platform expressly pledges the party to a revision of the tariff as soon as conditions shall make it necessary. In every department store and toy shop in the United States last December a large proportion of the toys offered for the Christmas trade bore the imprint of "Germany." German cutlery, optical goods, crockery, surgical instruments, and numerous other commodities are now coming into the United States at prices with which the American manufacturer can not possibly compete. Conditions have made it necessary for the imposition of protective duties for the preservation of the home market for American labor, agriculture and industry.

It is true that the farmers are not asking for a revision of the tariff today, but they were asking it a year ago and the first undertaking of the special session of Congress was the enactment of an emergency agricultural tariff law. Farmers who have already received the protection they demanded will endorse the desire of American manufacturers that they be given the same measure of protection that was accorded to agricultural interests. There is general demand for protection on all commodities not already protected under legislation passed by the Republican Congress.

A GLORIOUS ACHIEVEMENT.

The Conference on Limitation of Armament is coming to a close with a record of glorious achievement. It is disappointing, of course, to millennial dreamers, who let their hopes run riot. It does not give a guaranty of everlasting peace nor does it attempt such folly. It does not provide for the laying down of all arms and the destruction of all engines of war by land and sea. It does not profess to establish celestial relations among terrestrial peoples.

But it has taken the longest practical strides toward promotion of conditions essential to peace in the Pacific and Eastern Asia ever taken at any given time in human history. It has provided for cessation of competition in armament building. It has set at rest suspicions irritating enough to bring a belligerent feeling if not belligerent conduct. All of this has been done under the agenda added to the prime work of the conference as at first understood, but (as The Times pointed out from the beginning, dealing with problems whose solution was an absolutely indispensable condition to an agreement on limitation of armament.

It is impossible, of course, to discuss at this time every detail of the series of understandings reached by the patient but determined representatives of this and other nations since Armistice Day. There has been no wavering on the part of the American delegation from the essential program so carefully worked out. The premature alarmists who shouted themselves hoarse over fears no wind those fears groundless. Our delegates were clear-headed and firm, with all their conciliatory manner. They have not been moved by threats or bluffs. They have not been lured into sacrifices of sound principles. They have kept faith with America in every respect, while doing all that could be done to better international relations.

The work will meet the approval of the American people and we have every reason to believe that not even a handful of recalcitrants will be found in the Senate to oppose the treaties in their final form. Such criticism as has been raised was based on obvious misconception of what would accompany the first pact formally signed. The Washington conference will be one of the most notable in history. — St. Louis Times.

HOMEY PHILOSOPHY FOR 1922

If we'd all had a chance to buy a ticket to be present at the beginning of the world there'd have been such a rush some of us would have had to take back seats on the ocean. Just figure how you'd look on in wonder, the thrill you'd feel, the desire to plunge into the greatness of a land and explore its possibilities. Imagine the compelling wish you'd feel to do something, to be a part of the plan. Why not realize that a new world opens every day at sunrise, that its opportunities are there just as virgin as they ever were, just as filled with the possibility of doing something worth while? What do you say, if we all get up bright and early next Monday morning, watch the sun come up an' think hard; and then break away and go to work—harder? Boy, the world will be worth millions more if we all do it.

The boys will get the bonus all right the way it now looks, but when they get it the people are quite likely to realize who is going to realize who is going to pay the bills. — Portland Press-Herald.

CHARLES YOUNG, COLONEL.

The tidings just relayed from the Liberian boundary of the passing of Charles Young deeply stir the emotions. For there was but one Charles Young and there was no regular army colonel like him. Upon his shoulder straps the colonel's eagle bore an especial significance—he had soared to win it and none other of his kind had ever achieved it. For this man's skin was black. He was of a race despised, an American with the bar sinister stamped upon him. He was of those of our countrymen for whom, so some would have it, there is ordained only tillage, serfdom, the ranks, and the private's uniform, but never the officers' distinction and leadership are not to be theirs; good enough they are to be thrown into the mainstream of a world war by the hundred thousand, but not good enough to lead others or themselves. Was there not a congressman in Washington once who said of our Union that it "is not worth a curse as long as distinction exists between negroes and horses?"

Yet here was this man Charles Young who truly recognized such a distinction. When but a lad he dared to enter the portals of a West Point dedicated to the military caste and the white. For five long years he endured ostracism and insult, but would not be denied. Where others had failed he persevered and triumphed. There was a German general about that time, when it was still fashionable to regard the Prussians as the ablest sons of Mars, who visited West Point. "What was it," he was asked, "that you liked best there?" "The best thing I saw there was a black cadet in charge of a section of artillery; that is a soldier." And so Charles Young went forth a lieutenant to rise by steady steps in the two cavalry regiments of the blacks. He knew how to avoid the pitfalls laid for him; he understood perfectly that for him there must be a special code of uprightness and of duty. For him would be fatal the slip that meant glossing laughter for one of a lighter skin. So he bore himself blamelessly and looked daily in the eyes of all men without shame, without fear and with a great pride. He had God-given tact; he knew how not to offend and yet how to keep a complete self-respect. He intruded nowhere, yet he asked all the rights of his uniform and so compelled the respect of his associates that, be it set down to the credit of the army, he obtained the justice which alone he asked.

So it came to pass that after years after he had had his baptism of fire he commanded a battalion of his regiment in the field in Texas where black men wear once slaves, and there he mused for months with his subordinate officers, every one of whom was white. It was social equality, if you please, that dreaded scourge to offset which men are burned and hanged each year under the Stars and Stripes. But nothing happened in this organization; there was no friction, no quarrel and no cataclysm. The heavens above did not fall; neither did any inspector general report aught but what was good and soldierly of this battalion. Perhaps it was because of this, perhaps because it was known that of all the smaller volunteer bodies of the Spanish War there was none better than Charles Young's Ninth Ohio separate battalion with which no white man served, that when Charles Young was lieutenant colonel and our flag went into Mexico in 1916 he led his entire regular regiment after its colonel was disabled. It was John J. Pershing who commanded that column sent, fruitlessly, to capture Villa, "dead or alive," and throughout it was Pershing who kept Charles Young at the head of the Tenth cavalry when it would have been easy to put a white colonel over the black lieutenant colonel's head.

Alas, the justice of the service ended there—without question because Woodrow Wilson the seigneur, was President. Soon there were military medical men found who discovered in Charles Young a disease no civilian doctor could ever detect. Just when the opportunity to show what a colored commander could do when the greatest of wars was at hand, came for Charles Young the retired list with the full rank of colonel as an undesired sop. Activity was his, yes, but it would not do to let this man show again what he could be in the field. Idleness his spirit could not brook; this "disabled" man was ready for service anywhere. To Liberia, where he had already commanded the frontier guard, he went once more, and there in the jungle on a dangerous reconnaissance the jungle-fever claimed him. "Sooner or later," he had said in speaking of it, "it gets you." So died one who being a negro yet distinguished between a negro and a horse and smashed to smithereens, as have the colored generals in the French army, the absurdity that negroes can follow only if whites lead. It was the black Toussaint L'Ouverture and his blacks who successively defeated the veterans of France, of Spain, and of England, on the fields of Haiti. There was the stuff of L'Ouverture in Charles Young, in the flash of his eye and the lift of his head. —The Nation.

New York Letter

by Lucy Jeanne Price

New York — Marriage may be regarded as pretty desperate conduct to be advised. But is certainly less startling than bombs or black anarchy. The other day a gathering of the unemployed was held down on one of New York's waterfronts. Expectations were sensational. All sorts of courses were said to be contemplated. Some of the city's bravest reporters went in a body. The crowd was small but orderly, but hope's still smoldered in the onlookers hearts that the suggestions made by those who were to address them would be exciting enough to give some thrill. This was the most definite advice or suggestion: an orator named A. Goldman got up and said, "There was recently a story in the news of a young laboring man who married a rich woman much older than himself. I suggest that all of you find women of wealth and marry them."

—NY— Intellectual interest may take various forms. Theodore Maynard was much amused by the one and only demand for knowledge he was able to solicit from a verse class before which he lectured in New York. He concluded his remarks by reading from his poems, and then asked if there were any questions any one wished to ask. There was a long silence broken at length by a lilting feminine voice inquiring, "Who are you, please?"

—NY— We do get living nature — the true essence of the out-of-doors — in motion pictures as the spoken drama can never give it to us. And when, in addition to that, we have real drama, splendid characterization, good acting, skilled direction, exceptional photography and a great story—well, then we may be glad that we didn't live and die before the screen took its place in life. All this is called forth by having seen "The Prodigal Judge" the other night, a new film in which Macklyn Arbuckle does some of the best work of his career in the role of Judge Slocum Price. Love interest is not the dominating feature of the story but it is there, with Jean Paige as the heroine of it. If you saw her in "Black Beauty," you know what she can do. The play is based on a story by Vaughan Kester and is principally concerned with a politically prominent and aspiring citizen of the old South who flings away ambition and becomes a vagabond after his wife has run away with another man. If the Judge were more weakly drawn or acted, it would not be a great picture although it would be good. But with him as he is, and with all the rest that has been accomplished in the way of photography and "atmosphere," it is, —NY— The scarf has become almost the insignia of the age. Never outside of the Klondike did those articles have such vogue as they have right here in mild America. The latest domain to be invaded by them is the sands and waters of the sea! Scarfs of rubber in brilliant colors to match the bathing cap, adorned with painted figures and finished with long rubber fringe are the latest accessories to swimming and beaching costumes.

—NY— The third Zoe Akins play of the season is now in rehearsal, with Emily Stevens in the principal role. "Daddy's Gone a-Hunting" and "The Varying Shore" were both among the year's cordially received fair successes; but this new play, "St. Ursula" is said by those who have read it to ensure another such sensational victory for Miss Akins as did her achievement of two years ago, "De-classe."

—NY— Thirty-seven languages are listed and interpreted by official linguists go-between at Ellis Island, the chute through which the races pour into our city and country from all over the world.

WASHINGTON COMMENT.

The last Knickerbocker victim buried, the last maimed body shipped away to sorrowing relatives in the home town, official Washington turns wholeheartedly to the task of "holding investigations," "fixing the blame" and of uttering portentous and voluminous remarks designed to show the folks at home how much on the job the utterer is!

After a battle the burzards gather; after a holocaust the authorities who did nothing to prevent it gather to discuss whose fault it was!

All very necessary, doubtless, but rather ineffectual. Regardless of the cause of the disaster, whether it was weight of snow or weakness of steel or inefficiency of engineering or laxness of building inspection, or vibration caused by street cars on a crossing, the undoubted fact remains that it is not nearly so important to "fix the blame" and "punish the guilty" as it is vitally important to know whether other such accidents, both in the National Capital and in other cities, are now in process of getting ready to happen!

The nation will look with far more favor on the Congressman or Senator who initiates something concrete and tangible, looking to the prevention of such dreadful calamities in the future than on those who seek an ephemeral local notoriety by proposals to make a memorial park of the site or to decorate heroic rescuers, or to hang, draw, and quarter the committee of stockholders of the steel mill which hired the manager who employed the superintendent who paid the workman who rolled the steel which went into the truss which gave away!

"Yes, they are meeting, but what are they accomplishing?" Such has been the question on the lips of many thoughtful citizens anent the conference on limitation of armaments at Washington.

The wisest heads can never tell in advance what the result of a law, an agreement, a treaty, may be. The Versailles treaty was to do one thing; it did another. The Volstead law was to decrease crime; it created a brand-new crime and a lot of it. The Irish-British pact is a cat no one knows which way will jump, and the accomplishments of the Washington conference may work and may not!

But the Washington conference has produced results, if treaties be results. So far eight treaties have come out of the conference, in seven of which the United States is a party.

Whether they work or don't work, whether they aid or hinder the cause of peace, no one can say.

But they do demonstrate that when common-sense leadership and a firm determination to cut under secret diplomacy and the old regime's idea of international relations get to work, at least it is possible to wheedle, persuade or force nations to make agreements, which is a huge step in advance. Eight treaties:—Pacific, Arms Limitation, Submarine and Poison Gas German Cable Allocation, Chinese Tariff, Chinese Questions, Yap, and Chinese-Japanese Shantung treaty; they mark real milestones in the world's progress, and they are so many monuments to Warren G. Harding and Charles Evans Hughes, exponents of American common-sense.

DO WOMEN LOVE MORE THAN MEN?

Does a woman love more than a man? And, after marriage which retains more of the first joyous rapture of courtship — the husband or the wife? was the question asked one woman. She replied:

A woman's love, from the point of view of selfishness, is better and purer. When she loves a man she will sacrifice everything for his sake. She does things for her husband before she gives time to think of anything outside his needs.

A man is not so quick; the time he wastes in "thinking" the wife utilizes to help make his life more happy.

I know men who really love their wives and yet do not show it. The light of romance is hidden. It takes a lot to rouse it, but then it reveals the adoration that won their brides.

That is the secret of some men's love. They hide it. They cannot help it. It is part of their nature; and this reserve is put down to their lack of feeling. There are women whose nature is just the same.

Every person loves in a different way. We all know the story of the man who, after twenty years of marriage, went home one day and kissed his wife. She ran and tearfully confided to a neighbor that her husband had gone out of his mind!

Is she right?

MAIL DELIVERY IS FOILED AT ALEXANDRIA.

"I heard a peculiar noise while seated in my room above the jail," said Herman Kemper, jailer at Alexandria, county seat of Campbell county, Ky., Thursday, in explaining how he prevented prisoners from escaping. He investigated and discovered that the noise was caused by a improvised saw and that prisoners had cut through three bars in a window. Jail inmates, he said, had fashioned the saw out of a table knife. "My timely discovery thwarted a jail delivery," said Kemper.

Forest lands are cultivated in Sweden with as much care as is given to farms in America.

Nine-Cent Knife Brings Five Dollars in Chicago

Both knives were made in Germany. Both are the same size and equal in value. The knife to the left retailed for 9.6 cents in Berlin. The one to the right sold for $5 in Chicago.

U. S. MANUFACTURERS LOSE CUSTOMERS AND U. S. WORKMEN LOSE THEIR JOBS BUT THE CONSUMER PAYS PROFITEERS

CHAIRMAN FORDNEY, of the Ways and Means Committee of the United States House of Representatives, exhibited the knives photographed above to Congress. One cost nine cents in Germany; the other five dollars in Chicago.

A few days later a Chicago importing firm stated that the knife No. 2 cost twenty-five times nine cents and that it was bought in America. The Chicago firm bought the knife, which was manufactured by J. A. Henckels in Germany, from the American agent of that firm. The Chicago store paid $2.40 for it according to their own testimony giving the Chicago store a profit of more than 100 per cent. This is possible because the present tariff law provides that imported articles shall be subject to duty on their value in foreign money, and foreign money has dropped far below par so that the government is losing millions of dollars per day in revenue and the public is paying profiteering prices.

Chairman Fordney declares that the remedy is in the tariff bill now before the U. S. Senate. It provides that imported articles must pay duty on their value in this country. This is called "American valuation." Supporters of this bill say that importers and mail order houses are spending more than one million dollars to defeat it because it means death to their huge profits.

These adherents of American valuation also point out that never has such a fight been waged in Washington against a bill in Congress as is being waged against the Fordney tariff bill.

NORTH CAROLINA WEED MARKET CLOSING WITH GOOD AVERAGE

Plans Made By Wilson, N. C. Tobacco Board of Trade to Hold Sales for the Disposal of the 1922 Crop.

A Wilson, N. C., telegram dated Monday says:
The 1921 crop of tobacco has practically been sold. On account of unfavorable weather and the almost impassable condition of the roads leading into Wilson, there may be, perhaps, a few thousand pounds scattered here and there left in the hands of the planters which, no doubt the warehousemen will find a way to take care of when the weather clears up.
The Wilson market closed last Friday and H. B. Johnston, secretary of the tobacco board of trade reports the season's sales to be 42,844,162 pounds that brought $12,169,100.76 an all-round average for the season of $28.38 per hundred pounds. The 1920 crop was 62,204,960 pounds which sold for $13,446,384.91 an all-round average of $21.61 per hundred.

The season just closed has been strenuous for buyers and sellers that have been keeping up with the triple sales which kept the six large warehouse foremen on the move at all hours of day and night.
In order to give the producers better service, at the opening of the warehouses for the sale of the 1922 crop quadruple sales will be inaugurated and will continue through the season it is announced. This service should tend to attract those from a distance to market their weed to "the big tobacco town."

STATE'S FIVE-YEAR FIRE LOSS IS $21,867,315

Defective Flues Have Caused Greatest Fire Loss in Kentucky, Underwriters' Report Shows.

Kentucky's fire losses have cost the state $21,867,315 in the last five years, according to figures compiled by the actuarial bureau of the National Board of Fire Underwriters an announced yesterday.

Defective chimneys and flues led the list of "strictly preventable fires," $1,521,913; matches and smoking caused a loss of $1,072,111; stoves, boilers and pipes, $809,859; sparks on roofs, $957,088; petroleum and its products, $400,630.

In the partly preventable losses, conflagrations and other communicated fires cost $3,657,339; lightning $956,298 and unknown causes, regarded as largely preventable, $8,045,069. The state was the seventeenth on the list, which was led by New York with a five-year loss of $164,425,819.

The yearly average destruction by fire throughout the United States was $267,635,628, and the five-year total reached $1,338,173,142.

The estimators added 25 per cent to this average for unreported fires, making the total $1,672,722,677.

It was pointed out that this tremendous loss, if it could have been translated into construction, would have built 334,540 homes at $5,000 each and supply houses for 1,672,720 persons.
